Did you know Old Town Temecula is framed by two streets named after Mercedes Pujol? In honor of Women's History Month, let's find out the history behind Mercedes Street and Pujol Street...

It was 1876 when local businessman Domingo Pujol received word that the woman he was supposed to marry was finally old enough to take her vows. Domingo had been in United States territory since the 1850s, knowing that his family had an arranged marriage waiting for him back in Spain.

Imagine young Mercedes, engaged to an older man, a man she didn't know, now waiting for him by the altar.

Domingo Pujol was a lawyer and a businessman who owned part of a Mexican land grant called the Rancho Temecula. Before he left for Spain, he divided the holdings with his partners. The Murrieta brothers, Juan and Ezequiel, claimed the area that now is Murrieta. Domingo held on to 37,000 acres of land that included what would eventually include Old Town Temecula along today's Interstate 15 corridor.

Domingo didn't live in the Temecula Valley. He lived in San Francisco. It might be assumed that he planned to bring his new bride back to California, but that never happened. In 1881, Domingo died in Spain. His Temecula land became the property of his new, young wife.

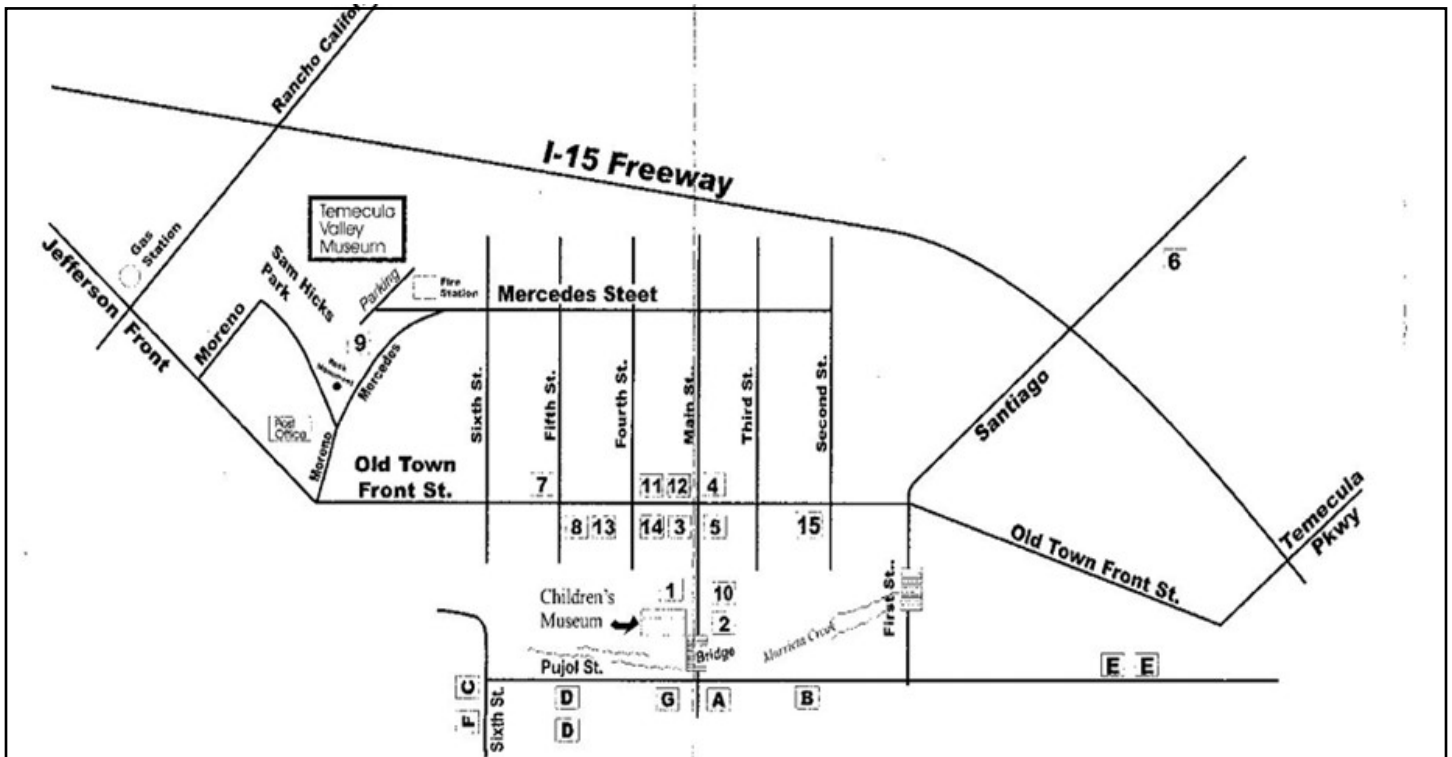

In 1884, Mercedes Pujol, along with her father and sister, took the long and arduous trip from Spain to California. She made a brief visit to Temecula in order to settle his estate.

Most of the property was sold to the Pauba Land and Water Company, but Mercedes didn't sell her entire holdings. Some land she kept aside and deeded it for use as a school, a cemetery, and a park.

During Women's History Month, take a quick drive down Mercedes Street in front of City Hall. Check out the Pujol school house building which has been moved and is currently at 29825 Santiago Road. At the other end of the street is the Temecula Valley Museum and Sam Hicks Monument Park, also once part of Mercedes Pujol's land. Leaving Mercedes Street, take Main Street through Old Town to Pujol Street where there are several historic homes from the later 1800s. At the end of your tour, pause a moment to think about what it would have been like for young Mercedes Pujol to visit the area for the first time. When she went back to Spain, she remarried and never returned. Today, the roads we travel are dedicated to Mercedes Pujol for her generosity.

Happy Women's History Month from the Temecula Valley Historical Society!

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

As this vibrant, all-volunteer non-profit seeks to fulfill our mission to identify, preserve and promote the historical legacy of the Temecula Valley and to educate the public about its historical significance, our desire to expand the days and hours for public access to our facilities and experiences increases the need for volunteers.

There are so many ways to participate and contribute. The profile of the perfect Temecula Valley Historical Society volunteer? A positive, can-do person willing to roll up their sleeves and get involved to help share our story.

Help is always welcomed in a variety of ways, not only physically at the Vail Headquarters and Little Temecula History Center, but in this day and age - remotely as well through involvement with behind the scenes administrative and committee responsibilities.

What do our volunteers do?

A smiling, friendly face sells train ride tickets at the Vail Headquarters; a handy DIY person assists with ongoing restoration and repair projects; a docent answers visitor questions at the Little Temecula History Center; a volunteer remotely catalogs historic payroll records of ranch hands; closet thespians, with research and enthusiasm, can become costumed 'Notables', bringing historic figures of the Temecula Valley to life at special events and presentations.

Examples of these wonderful volunteers include Dara, sharing the fascinating story of the chuckwagon at the History Center with 3rd graders on a school tour; Marcus, who spent countless hours cataloging and organizing historic records; Wendy, distributing announcements and maintaining meeting minutes as board secretary; Conductor Keith giving the kids a ride they will always remember on the miniature train at the Vail Headquarters; Roger flawlessly executing the thankless and burdensome task of maintaining detailed accounting records; Ireland helping out at the Headquarters Antique Store and anywhere else needed; Bonnie constantly recruiting volunteers to help us fulfill this ongoing mission.

These are just a few examples of the more than 30 people, board members to event volunteers, who step up to ensure the history of our fascinating valley is preserved and celebrated.

If you have the interest and desire to add your energy to our altruistic efforts, we'd love to hear from you and work together to figure out where your talents can best be utilized. Let us know by expressing your interest at:
